Pinched by Jarvis bill, trustees decide to save money for the fall term

Carmel summer school is canceled

By KEN PETERSON

THE CARMEL UNIFIED School District board of trustees canceled summer school sessions Tuesday to help offset property tax losses under Proposition 13.

Summer school was to have started next Monday.

In reaction to the passage of the Jarvis-Gann tax limitation initiative, the trustees also voted at their second special meeting within five days to:

- Cancel the summer Regional Occupational Program, a vocational education program for high school students.
- Put adult school classes and the summer recreation program on a "pay-as-you-go" basis beginning with summer sessions.
- Rent fees for facilities will be high enough to allow the facilities to be self-sustaining.

The trustees agreed to take applications to fill the assistant superintendent post being vacated by Robert Whitehead, however. Retiring Superintendent Harris Taylor recommended the move, saying the district already has a small administrative staff compared to other districts statewide. He also pointed out at a study session last Friday that the new superintendent, Dr. Carl Wilsey, will need a lot of administrative help adjusting to Prop. 13 and in growing familiar with a new district.

CLOSE TO 75 PARENTS and program organizers crowded into the Carmel Middle School library for the special session Tuesday night.

Taylor told the crowd that by cutting these summer programs, the district would save approximately $125,000. "Sacramento has, in effect, told the school board 'you can have summer school but if you do, you won't have any money from the state,' " he said. "The $125,000 means five or six teachers for fall."

Trustee Frances Gaver said she hoped parent clubs can help find programs to occupy the students. "I refuse to interpret Prop. 13 as repudiation of the public education in this country."

Dan Yerkovich, advisor to the adult school, explained that no program had been designed at this point for summer adult school, but he said "it is a program that ought to be able to sustain itself.

Support was expressed by the audience for creating a self-sustaining recreation program. A sample fee schedule had been written since Friday's special session. It would maintain the pools at a break-even point of $1,500 a month. Fees ranged from 50 cents for a single admission to $23 per swimmer for the Barracuda Swim Team, which included pool use and coaches' salaries.

When David Hardy, a parent from Carmel, questioned where the money would come from to pay a possible deficit,

Other programs must hike fees

Mrs. Gaver said, "Don't count on the school district to make up the deficit."

Mrs. Mary Kay Morris, active in the Barracuda club program, said "If we are given a month, we will have enough money to let kids swim who want to. We can become self-sustaining."

MOST OF THE BACKGROUND discussion behind the votes took place at the Friday study session before Trustee Clayton Neill went on vacation. Wilsey also sat in on the study session, although he did not take part in the discussion.

More than 50 parents and teachers crowded into the meeting room in the district office at Middle School, forcing a move to the school library.

Taylor asked for the summer program cancellations and changes as the first phase of the district's reaction to Prop. 13. He said it would be "foolhardy" to do any more cutting now since the district still doesn't know what revenue it will receive and thus cannot plan intelligently beyond the summer programs.

But, Taylor said, the district does know it will not get state attendance credit for summer school, cutting out the source of money that made summer programs profitable.

"Do we want to diminish our regular school program to support summer school?" he asked. "I think the answer is obvious."

Fireman's Ball on tap for Saturday night

Benefit slated at Hidden Valley starting at 9 p.m.

Dance to the music of the Royals Saturday night from 9 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. at the 30th annual Fireman's Ball. The Diamond Jubilee of the annual fireman's funfest will be at Hidden Valley Music Seminar and gives residents an opportunity to meet department members on an informal basis and to express their appreciation for past services through their tax deductible donations ($3 for singles and $5 for couples) to the nonprofit organization. Donations benefit the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department.

Advance ticket sales indicate a large turnout, according to social chairman Fran Hughes and committee members Dan Weiss, Gary Tate and Augie Acuna. "Libations will be sold and we request that only those over age 21 attend the ball," said Fran.

Adding their invitation to the committee's to join the festivities are Chief Bill Sims and Don Weber, Don Cummings, Pete Garneau, Bill Parham, Don Corona, Kalani Fonseca, Gerry Paddock, Stan Roberts, John Radon, Dan Weiss, Jeff Frye, Ken Van Hagen, Larry Busick, Larry Cisneros, Dick Crane, Augie Acuna, Tom Augustitus, Roger Gardner, David Cummings, John Schaffer, Jerry Kurz, John Woods, Bob Bartlett, Bill Conlan Jr., Fran Hughes, Bill Owen, Pete Randall, Gary Tate, Mike Viljoen, Art Harber and J. B. Bowe.

THE CARMEL VALLEY Volunteer Fire Department's annual Fireman's Ball is scheduled Saturday night at Hidden Valley Music Seminars. The department provides year-around fire protection as well as the American Red Cross ambulance service. Sylvia Panetta, a registered nurse, was capped as an honorary volunteer recently by Engineer Jeff Frye of the department.

Tularcitos parents name new co-presidents

New co-presidents Sara and Fred Slautterback accepted the gavel from retiring co-presidents Gini and Jim Luttrell at the final meeting of the Tularcitos Parents Club last week.

Other members of the incoming executive committee include Nancy Watts, vice president; Valerie McKay, recording secretary; Sue Clayton, treasurer; and Natalie Rodda, corresponding secretary. The Slautterbacks will announce their committee chairmen in the fall.

Final plans were discussed for renovating and improving the Bob Robinson Memorial Outdoor Classroom. Plans have been drawn by architect Augie Acuna and funds for the project were raised by Parent Club projects.

Carmel High honors coaches, players

Daisies and baseballs were the decor and theme at the annual Carmel High School potluck dinner party honoring coaches and players of the Carmel High Mission Trail Athletic League champion baseball team hosted in the high school cafeteria. Pat Bordonaro was chairman of the affair assisted by Mary Bogue, Joan Vandervort, Natalie Brenneman, Duncan Lewis and Carole Dean Matson.

Slides of varsity Padre action during the season were shown during the evening by Varsity coach, Monty Feekes, named MTAL coach of the year.

Co-awards for the Most Valuable Varsity players were presented to two Valley Padres, Steve Sepersky, pitcher, and David McKenzie, outfielder. Varsity captain title went to Peter Rolfing of Carmel; the "Stopper award" (for pitching) to Sepersky; and the Paul Artellan Award for scholarship and leadership to Valleyite John Frincke.

Dual Most Valuable Junior Varsity Player awards went to Dave Spear and Mike Wecker, both of Carmel. Other Junior Varsity honors announced by Coach Joe Feldeisen were Buz Fulton, Carmel Valley, "Stopper award"; Dwight Spicher, Carmel Valley, Most Improved; and Corey Bliesner, Carmel, captain.

In the Frosh-Soph spotlight were Marc Rede, Carmel, Most Valuable Player; Mark Raynes, Carmel Valley, "Stopper award"; and Tony Rowedder, Carmel Valley, Most Improved.

Valley garden club enjoys Petal-Pushers Potluck

There was a "Petal-Pushers Potluck Picnic" on Saturday at the Scarlet Road home of Bernice Leoni for members of the Carmel Valley Garden Association who enjoyed good food, good friends and the lovely gardens at the Leoni residence. Betsy Shea was chairman of the garden party beside the river.

It was a pleasant time to review the success of the club's recent flower show and to honor the outgoing and incoming board members. Reeford Shea has been elected to serve a second term. Assisting him will be Alice Johnson, vice president; Lois Deal, corresponding secretary and treasurer; Ann Marshall, recording secretary; and Mary Jernegan and Dick Scammon, board members.

Mable Love turns 90

"I don't feel any different than I did when I was 30," exclaimed Mable Love as she sat before a three-tiered birthday cake glittering with 90 candles at the celebration marking her marvelous milestone.

The nonagenarian, one of Carmel Valley's most loved senior citizens, was born in a log cabin in Freeport, Pa., on May 23, 1888. She came to California in 1951 and to the Valley in 1953, where she made her home until recently.

Active in Carmel Valley Community Chapel and community projects, her renown as an excellent cook has spread and several generations remember holiday treats from Mrs. Love's magic oven.

A full-time babysitter, Mrs. Love became an honorary grandparent to the scores of youngsters she cared for over the years. Her own family consists of daughter, Jean, son-in-law, Norman Friddle, and grandson, Mark with whom she makes her home in Monterey. Other grandchildren include Jean Gorham of Pacific Grove, Kennett Friddle of Scotland, Mike Friddle of New York and Guy Friddle of Florida. In addition, she has eight great-grandchildren, four boys and four girls.

Among the friends dropping by for birthday cake and punch were:

Anita Evans, Nancy Evans, C. K. Wu, Capt. and Mrs. Thomas McKiernon, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Naslund, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Heckenlaible, Cheri Gorham, Barbara Stevenson, Lily Pearson, Tom Hagen, Muriel Loessel, Eleanor Stauffer, Rev. and Mrs. Don Johnson, Dorothy Trevino, Marge Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Leyva, T. J. Carlos and Roseann, Valerie Chambers and Christine Chambers.

Mrs. Love would enjoy cards at her new address, 227 Montecito Ave., Monterey.

Aid search on for pauperized fire districts

COUNTY AND COMMUNITY officials will meet Friday to find some way to pay for fire protection in lower Carmel Valley and Pebble Beach which was funded by property taxes before Proposition 13 passed.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors gave Public Works Director Bruce McClain permission Tuesday to discuss the matter with advisory committees for the two county service areas—42 and 43—which provide fire protection.

McClain also will investigate the possibility of having lighting service trimmed back or eliminated in tax-funded lighting districts in the Carmel area and throughout the county.

He said he may ask the supervisors to order the lights out in all districts beginning July 1, with service to be re-evaluated at the end of daylight savings time.

As far as funding fire protection, McClain said he will discuss the matter with the service area advisory committees and look at three interim solutions:

- Renegotiate their contracts with the California Department of Forestry for interim service at the same rate as last year, which would mean a cutback in service.
- Negotiate a contract for a higher rate with fewer men working in the districts.
- Negotiate a contract with fewer men and at a lower rate than last year, meaning greater service cutbacks.

He said he also will look into the possibility of service fees for fire protection as a long-term means to fund the firefighters.

McClain told the supervisors in a report last month that the two districts in the Carmel-Pebble Beach area would not have enough money to provide fire service through the year without property taxes. Under the muddled tax picture now facing local government, it is uncertain how much revenue they can count on.

The Pebble Beach Advisory Committee indicated earlier that it believes it could win a tax override election to continue financing fire protection. Some determination would have to be made first, however, of what two-thirds of the "qualified electors" means under Prop. 13. That is the vote required for local governments to vote property tax increases after July 1.

It also would be required for fees or assessment increases after July 1.

Graduating seniors say good-by to Carmel High

Parents and relatives watch 250 graduate

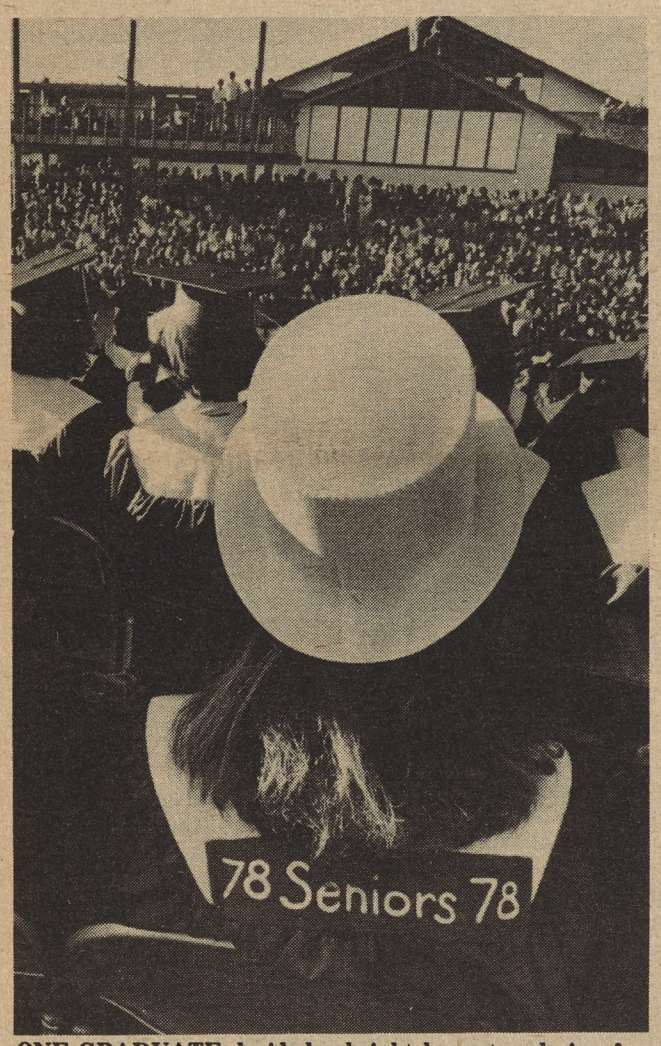
PROUD PARENTS and relatives and anxious graduating seniors gathered Friday evening for the 38th annual commencement at Carmel High School.

There were three valedictorians—Terri Thomas, Tina Wald and Belle Yang—and the high school concert band, directed by Henry Avila, played Pomp and Circumstance.

More than 250 seniors received diplomas.

During the evening ceremonies, resigning Superintendent Harris A. Taylor was given the Gold "C" award for service to the high school. He also received a Mickey Mouse baseball cap which he wore to the delight of the graduates.

Summing up the emotions of graduation, one class member, Anne Leonard, wrote a poem included in the printed commencement program. She read in part, "Things once important are often soon forgotten. The myriad impressions are what builds an everlasting memory."



ONE GRADUATE decided a bright bonnet and sign for her gown was appropriate on graduation day. (Michael Stang photos)

BELLE Yang delivered the valedictory address at commencement. She also designed the printed program for the ceremonies. Belle has a regent's scholarship to UC Santa Cruz.

School board cuts summer spending

He told trustees in answer to questions that the district would not hold up graduation for students who need summer classes to finish high school.

Taylor had recommended elimination of the adult school programs, saying "if we deny (summer school) to district children, we surely ought to deny it to district adults. It would be hard to justify."

But he had Yerkovich investigate charging fees equal to the cost of the classes in an effort to keep some of them going.

He also told trustees Friday that his first thought was to eliminate the $200,000-per-year recreation program, which primarily offers swimming lessons and public pool access at Carmel High School and at the community center in Carmel Valley.

TAYLOR SAID HE believed it was "something people thought about as a frill we could cut" when they voted for Prop. 13.

"Sober reflection" convinced him keeping the pools open would be a good idea to "take up the slack" caused by eliminating summer school.

The trustees asked for fee schedules for family swim passes and swimming lessons to make the pool operations self-sufficient.

The district swimming teams—the Barracudas, Tadpoles and Polywogs—also will have to hire their own coaches, pay for bus transportation and a portion of the pool maintenance to keep going, Taylor advised a parent from the groups at the Friday study session. The advisory board for the teams met Monday night to discuss financing.

Most of the audience opposition to the planned cutbacks centered around Taylor's recommendation that a successor for Whitehead be hired. Teachers and parents felt classroom teachers should be retained before hiring an additional administrator.

But Trustee Richard Wilsdon noted that "I don't think people realize that for the last 10 to 12 years, we have been making cuts in administration. There are no more administrators than when I came here 11 years ago yet the administrative workload has doubled."

Taylor cited studies that show the ratio of administrators and all other non-teaching employees to teachers in the Carmel district is lower than for any neighboring district and well below the state average.

PARENTS ALSO QUESTIONED whether summer school could merely be delayed or started up and later canceled if it turns out there is no money.

Taylor said in discussions with other administrators at neighboring districts, there seemed to be too many problems with scheduling to change summer school dates.

As for funding it and taking a chance the revenue would come through, he advised against taking a gamble.

"If we lose, we could decimate our regular program," he said.

Ron Pasquinelli, who headed Yes on 13 campaign on the Peninsula, argued that the summer school should not be cut.

"The proponents of Prop. 13 didn't envision cutting programs," he said, his comments interrupted by uneasy laughter. "They want you to cut the fat."

"The district does not want to cut any of these programs," Wilsdon said. "The voters of the state have said a lot of these programs have to go. I don't want to see one teacher cut, one course cut, one program cut. But we're going to have to.

"And there's not one I'm going to cut I won't bleed over."

Mrs. Gaver said the most optimistic outlook is for a 10 per cent cut in the district budget, meaning $600,000 over the course of a year.

"All we can do is make the best of what we are faced with," she said.

All four trustees attending the meeting Tuesday agreed with the preliminary cutbacks. Wilsdon offered the motion to adopt them.

C.V. Ranch sells 120 memberships

It took only two days to sell all 120 charter memberships in the recently opened Carmel Valley Ranch Tennis Club. Each membership sold for $400.

Developers now have filed for a use permit that would allow them to add eight more courts and sell an additional 240 memberships. The regular memberships would cost $800.

Project manager Kaye Chandler said all the memberships sold out by closing time on Sunday, June 4, after the grand opening of the club the previous day. Most of them were purchased by Valley residents, he said, with individuals in Monterey and other Peninsula cities also buying into the club.

If Monterey County officials approve the additional eight courts the club membership would reach 360 at the top level, according to Chandler.

The court locations have been moved from the west side of the main clubhouse to the east side, he said. Representatives of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church on Robinson Canyon Road had complained about the proximity between the church and the planned courts.

Chandler said the new courts would be similar to the three visible from Carmel Valley Road, surrounded by landscaping and bordered by raised earth berms.

The Specific Plan for the ranch permits the 12 courts.

No hearing date has been set on the application.

Swim class still on

Summer swim instruction will open Monday, according to Dan Yerkovich, director of Carmel school recreation programs.

Registration at Carmel High School will be taken today, Friday and Monday morning. In Carmel Valley, the same dates apply. Register at the pool at the Community Center.

The fee is $17 for the six-week course. For additional information, phone 624-3342.

Little League extends its thanks to team sponsors and volunteers

By PATTI HUSTED
Carmel Valley Little League

CARMEL Valley Little League would like to take this chance to thank everyone involved in the league for their continuing support, dedication and help throughout the year.

There have been so many parents who offered their services and talents, too numerous to mention individually. There is no substitute for the volunteer in little league, so a special thanks to all of you.

Important to the league are the team sponsors. The people who provide the financial sponsorship and support are appreciated for their community efforts. The thanks goes to: Monte Allen Masonry (Falcons), Kiwanis (Indians), Will's Fargo (Tigers), Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department (Volunteers), The Buckeye (Wildcats), Porter Marquard Realty (Cubs), Bank of America (Hornets), Garrett Cleaning (Pirates), Plaza Linda (Toros), Murphy's Lumber (Wolfpack) and Mike Rohan's Texaco (who sponsors two teams—Lions and Wolverines).

THE COACHES and managers, who dedicate their time providing the leadership to the teams, deserve an accolade. The people who give willingly to teach our youth the meaning of sportsmanship are: (Minor League) David Whipple, Monica Schmaltz, "MO," Heather Golden, Jim Brown, Bianca Cotta, Mike Viljoen, John Constanza, Mr. Abbott, Mike Topham, Ted Leidig, Warren Courtney and Chris Caves. (Major League) Terry Seeders, John Gardiner, Ed Lee, Dick King, Augie Acuna, Ray Lucido, Make Macauley, John, Joe DiMaria, Mike Mahoney, Kevin Sullivan and Larry Parrish.

With regret, the league says good-by and extends best wishes and big thanks to Scotty Foster, who will be moving out of the area. Scotty is the coach of the Wolfpack and has worked hard and dedicated much of his time and effort to Carmel Valley Little League for many years. He will be missed by all.

Last but not least is a thank you to all those brave people who have the most difficult task to undertake—the umpire. No matter what they call or don't call, it just isn't the right call. All who have volunteered deserve recognition for the efforts. So here's a cheer instead of a jeer to our umpires.

There is a little more than a week left in the season, and if you haven't made it out to the ballpark yet, come down and watch the game, and buy your ticket to the Fourth of July barbecue.

Catching it

by Mark Silva

To be a catcher in baseball is to be the center of attention on the field. The catcher is responsible for making the pitching calls, he must be cool even in the most heated of games, and most important of all, the catcher must protect home plate.

Steve Powers is a catcher and he knows the pressures of his job. "A lot more things are directed at me. I get the ball almost every time the pitcher throws it."

A product of Carmel High, where he played all four years on the varsity team and holds almost every major school record, Powers did not originally intend to be a catcher. In fact, he started as a shortstop, but when he got to Monterey Peninsula College, he found that his chances of playing shortstop were limited, so he took the catcher slot.

His decision has more than paid off for him. During January, Powers became the first round (out of 24) draft choice of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Last year, Powers was voted the Most Valuable Player in the NCAA College World Series while attending his last year at Arizona State University.

To what does Powers attribute his success? "My coaches while I was attending Carmel High and MPC," he answers. "Both coaches at Carmel and MPC were catchers in college, so I felt I got more of an advantage."

The future holds a lot for Powers. His possibilities are broad and exciting. If he should sign with Pittsburgh, he will be assigned to their minor league farm team in Oregon.

"The appeal of playing professional baseball is strong, especially since I want to give pro ball a crack," said Powers.

But deep down, Powers wants to realize his dream of working with retarded children. "I majored in recreation and want to work with children who need special help, but I think I will give baseball my best shot and hope for the best," Powers adds.

Carmel High and MPC coaches have made the difference in his career, according to Powers, for without them, he may not have been as successful as he is today. "Carmel High gave me my start in baseball and I will be always grateful for that," said Powers.

Cobras' winning season

The Carmel Middle School girls' softball team ended its season on a high note defeating Salinas Junior High School, 19-2.

Salinas scored the first two runs in the top of the first inning to take an early lead, but they could not hold on. The middle school Cobras scored eight runs in the bottom of the first and led the rest of the way.

The team finished in third place with an overall record of 8-7.

Looking forward to next year, coach Pat Lee says that she should have six returning players. "We are losing Kim Williams, an outfielder, Vanessa Williams, our catcher, and Cheryl Reed, our third baseman. They were three of our best hitters and defensive players this year," says Pat.

The six players who will be returning are Henrietta Jordan, Kerry Surman, Justine Reed, Almetra Green, Darlene Williams and Janet Dunn. "This is an excellent nucleus for next year's team. I feel that we could have one of the best teams in the league next year. We all had a super season this year and wish all the girls who are going off to high school the best of luck," says Pat.

Amateur golfers vie at Pebble Beach

More than 200 of California's best amateur golfers will compete in the California Golf Association's 67th annual Amateur Championship Sunday-Saturday, June 18-24, at Pebble Beach and Cypress Point golf courses.

The competition will begin Sunday with North-South team matches, in which the top amateurs from the Northern California Golf Association meet a team from the Southern California Golf Association. The South won last year's matches 24½ to 20½.

Qualifying rounds begin at 7 a.m. Monday and Tuesday on both golf courses. Play moves to Pebble Beach Wednesday with the low 64 players and ties competing.

After Wednesday's round, the field will be cut to the top 32, who will enter match play Thursday. Double rounds are scheduled for morning and afternoon on Friday, with the 36-hole championship match scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Spectators are welcome to observe the matches. No entry fee will be charged, although the $4 gate fee into the Del Monte Forest will be in effect.

For more information, phone 649-8500.

Uncertainty marks first days of new water board

FOUR OF THE five newly elected Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board of directors met informally Monday night to discuss when and how the district will get to work.

But uncertainties about financing for the district and delays in naming the two appointed members to the seven person board will probably push their first meeting date into July.

Monterey Peninsula voters approved creation of the district in the June 6 primary election, approving Measure A by a 3,000-vote margin. The measure won 56 per cent of the vote.

Elected to the first board of directors were William Gianelli, a Pebble Beach consulting engineer and former director of the State Water Project; William Woodward of Pacific Grove, a retired geophysicist and financial planner; Alfred Gawthrop of Pebble Beach, a retired executive with the Pebble Beach Corp.; educator Nancy McClintock of Seaside; and Carmel Highlands climatologist John Williams.

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors delayed its appointment to the board Tuesday, where both Peninsula supervisors—Michal Moore and Sam Farr—want the post. Peninsula mayors also must agree on their representative to the board. The Carmel City Council went on record Monday endorsing Farr.

The informal meeting was organized by Farr. According to Gianelli, only Mrs. McClintock was unable to attend.

He said the board members will wait until the results of the election are certified by the county board and until some uncertainties about conflict-of-interest statements are cleared up before planning a first meeting.

Gianelli said there is no firm date when the mayors will make their appointment. The supervisors will name either Farr or Moore to the board next Tuesday. Supervisor Edwin Norris of Salinas, saying he had not had enough time to study the matter, asked for the one-week extension.

FARR, who has been involved with the district since its inception and helped draft the legislation permitting formation of the district, was nominated for the post by Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City. There was no second to his motion.

Supervisor Kenneth Blohm of North County had earlier placed Moore's name in nomination. There was no second to that motion either.

Moore suggested that he should get an initial appointment for a year and five months so his term would not conflict with his chairmanship of the supervisors in 1980. Farr will chair the county board next year.

If Farr gets the appointment, Moore said he would not want to be on the district board at the same time he is chairman of the board of supervisors.

Gianelli said Tuesday he views the simultaneous passage of Proposition 13 and the water district legislation as "a challenge. People have said they don't want a water shortage and they want every public agency to be efficient and cost-conscious.

"I WOULD hope we can enlist help from the expertise in the community. I'd like to start moving in several directions. I hope we can get people to volunteer their services," he said.

Gianelli, top vote-getter in the directors' election, said the board members agreed Monday they would not make any recommendations to the Public Utilities Commission when it reopens hearings at the end of the month on the water meter and connection moratorium imposed on California-American Water Co.

The district would not be in operation by then and, he noted, the existing Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency has all the information and expertise on the matter now.

Teacher retires after 26 years

PETER GLOD, a 26-year teaching veteran in the Carmel Unified School District, retired from his elementary school job at Carmelo School last week.

Glod had taught primary grade students at every district elementary school except Captain Cooper School in Big Sur during his career with the district. He was honored by Carmelo School last Thursday for his service there and received a certificate of appreciation from the district board of trustees.

The trustees also served cake and coffee at their meeting in a farewell party for Glod.

"All of us have been hurt in recent years by the comments made about the professionals in the field of education," Trustee Frances Gaver told Glod at the meeting. "I would like to acknowledge publicly the debt we owe to you and your fellow professionals for what you've done for our children.

"For 26 years, you have worked with our kids, been patient with them, loved them and on behalf of the board, I would like to thank you."

Glod told the board that "I enjoyed all my years here. It's a wonderful district to be in. You as a board should be proud of what you have."

Glod lives with his wife, Gretchen, in Carmel Valley.

Lyceum auditions Friday

Auditions for voice students who wish to participate in the Carmel Bach Festival-Lyceum Choral Workshop have been scheduled for Friday, June 16, at the Church of the Wayfarer, Lincoln and Seventh, Carmel.

Priscilla Salgo, workshop director, will lead the auditions for the three-week workshop which begins June 19.

For audition appointments or more information, phone 372-6098 or 659-4326.

First units OK'd at C.V. Ranch

THE CARMEL VALLEY RANCH rezoning was approved by Monterey County planning commissioners Wednesday, opening the way for the first 160 units of residential development on the property.

The commission also approved the public access trails agreement between the ranch developers and the Monterey Peninsula Regional Parks District. This provides for hiking and horseback trails through 1,200 acres of permanent open space and trails along the Carmel River near the golf course and housing developments.

The preliminary map for the first two years of construction on the ranch property was accepted by the commission. They left until later, at the tentative map stage, requiring answers to major environmental issues surrounding the project at Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley Roads: proving water from the Tularcitos Aquifer exists and is available to the ranch, and designing a functional sewage treatment system that uses wastewater for golf course irrigation on the property.

Kaye Chandler, project manager for the ranch development, said Wednesday afternoon he expects to have all the information in for the tentative map hearing by mid-August.

REZONING OF THE PROPERTY was recommended by the county planning staff and the Lower Carmel Valley Advisory Committee to bring the development areas into conformity with the Specific Plan for the ranch. The commission endorsed the proposals on a 5-1-1 vote, Chairman Charmaine Cruchett opposing and Paul Patchick abstaining to "avoid the appearance of prejudice."

Patchick made some geological studies of the ranch for the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association before he joined the commission.

The rezoning actions taken Wednesday would permit townhouses in two clusters, one with 85 units on 17.5 acres,

Master plan debate

Growth limit certain, how it would work isn't

THE CARMEL VALLEY Master Plan Study Committee will recommend a growth management system in its final report, although the specifics of that system are far from being resolved.

The committee voted last Thursday to place some quota on new development during the 20-year life of the master plan.

But there still is strong disagreement about whether the limit should be on residential construction, lot splits, commercial development, hotels and motels or any combination of those categories.

And Jack Van Zander of Bestor Engineers Inc. questioned whether a growth management system will provide the economic incentives to encourage the type of development supported philosophically by the committee.

Committee member Mel Vercoe, who has recommended a lid on the ultimate buildout for the Valley, said a 20-year ceiling on development could open the county up to inverse condemnation suits because "what we've done is say that x-amount of developable land in the Carmel Valley shall remain undeveloped for the next 20 years. Time is valuable."

Landowners can file inverse condemnation suits on the claim that their property value was diminished by development limits imposed by government.

Planning Commissioner William Peters, the nonvoting chairman of the 13-member committee, said this would not be a problem since "every developer has the chance of being the next one approved" under a quota system. They would only know at the end of the 20-year period if their project didn't make it.

Peters added that Vercoe's proposal for development rights transfers—which allows potential density from one parcel to be sold and used on another—still could be adopted by the committee. The action setting some quota for the next 20 years only means the committee wants to manage growth in some way, he said.

TWO ISSUES were the subject of most committee debate during the three-hour session last week: Whether there should be quotas for commercial and visitor facilities, and whether the committee should recommend only a 20-year growth limit or discuss the ultimate carrying capacity of the Valley and plan accordingly.

Vercoe argued that the economic potential of the Valley is so great that it could become another Carmel in terms of attracting visitors and visitor-oriented businesses.

"To not talk about the commercial potential of Carmel Valley, the attractiveness of Carmel Valley for commercial development, is to ignore the economic facts," he said. "The real use is not going to be residential."

He cited the heavy interest in developing new tourist accommodations in the area, saying that Carmel Valley is more in demand for "high-priced recreational and commercial development" than it is for high-priced residential development.

Vercoe said that lending institutions have been "reluctant" to put money into commercial development of Carmel Valley Village because of the potential for governmental constraints.

"If the only constraint is the existing zoning, it will grow, and grow very rapidly," he warned.

Committee member Don Middleton countered that there is limited land space for commercial development in the Valley to support high intensity use.

And the committee agreed generally that there is no way to dictate how many shops can go in a given area or whether they will serve tourists or residents.

MIDDLETON ALSO pointed out that most of the tourist-oriented business is going in at the mouth of the Valley as "an extension of Carmel."

The committee split 6-6 on whether to have a quota for business development. It agreed, however, to seek a limit on the number of new visitor accommodations.

A survey of the committee came up with an average of 412 new rooms in the next 20 years.

Members also said they would like to see 746 new rooms in an ultimate buildout.

But Middleton said, "I don't see how anyone in this room can talk about ultimates. Our vision is limited."

Vercoe said the ultimates would be based on "a value judgment, today's value judgment."

Van Zander agreed that the committee should look at ultimate development of the Valley, although he envisions a higher buildout figure than many of the other committee members.

He cited the problems in Marina, where the original five-acre estates were split up into a morass of cul-de-sac streets with homes on small parcels.

"If we plan in 20 years for five- to 10-acre estates, in 50 years we could end up dividing them in minor subdivisions," he warned.

VAN ZANDER AGAIN repeated his oft-sounded warning that the good intentions of the committee do not mesh with the economic realities of development in Carmel Valley.

"What I see from the tenor of the majority of this committee is parcel pollution," he said.

Van Zander said the committee might envision one type of development for an area, but the owner might choose for economic reasons to go another way.

He also asked if a project like the Carmel Valley Ranch might be prevented because of master plan restrictions.

"I wouldn't want to foreclose the possibility of getting a hell of a lot of open space set aside" in exchange for higher density on a portion of a large parcel, he said. He pointed out that there are only 50 parcels in the Valley study area greater than 20 acres in size.

Schools suffer two blows

by Al Eisner

THE CARMEL UNIFIED School District suffered two blows last week. The external attack, shared by cities, counties and school districts throughout the state, was the passage of Proposition 13.

The other blow was the sharp criticism of the academic program at the high school by a group of graduating seniors published in last week's edition of this newspaper.

When new superintendent Carl Wilsey takes up his duties next month, he and the school board trustees will have their work cut out for them. Already reeling from the restraints placed on "rich" school districts by the fallout from the Serrano-Priest decision, the district will have to slash, trim and cut to be able to function with an estimated drop of $2.5 million from its proposed $6.8 million budget.

Outgoing Superintendent Harris Taylor predicted before the election that passage of Prop. 13 would result in the layoff of 119 staff members, including 49 classroom teachers; closure of two schools with low enrollments; increase in class size by seven students per class; elimination of all extracurricular activities, including athletics; and many more drastic measures.

(Acting quickly, the school board this week canceled the summer school program and ruled that the adult education program and the summer recreation program would have to be self-supporting.)

IF YOU MISSED last week's paper, we urge you to beg, borrow or steal a copy just to read what the graduating seniors had to say about the quality of education at Carmel High School. Here are a few excerpts:

"You have to challenge yourself."

"The senior year is so easy. You can do what you want, learn what you want."

"I'm in an easier math class now than when I was in the eighth grade."

"Kids can get away with anything they want, practically."

"It would be good to see classes get harder, more basic."

"If I want to sit in the sun and don't want to go to class, I can go sit in the sun."

When our reporter suggested interviews with the graduating seniors, I expected the usual sentimental assessments by the students of the "wonderful" years spent in Carmel schools. Imagine my surprise when I read that the kids were echoing the sentiments of a growing number of parents who are fed up with the laissez-faire attitude of the local school system.

THE SIZE OF THE majority approving the Jarvis Amendment was a signal from taxpayers that they were concerned about the growing size of government. The message should be clear to our school board trustees: with a national trend toward emphasis on the basics and with a starvation budget, our schools should minimize their role as babysitters or providers of entertainment and stick to their role as teachers of reading, writing, arithmetic and other basics.

ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT Robert Whitehead will be missed. The popular former principal at Carmel Middle School was liked and respected by students, parents and teachers. He accepted a position in the Seattle area for family reasons. We join the hundreds of local folks who wish him good luck in his new job.

Give aways

Dear Editor:

A recent report tells us that the House of Representatives approved a $3.5 billion foreign aid bill. Why we still hand out foreign aid all over the world is difficult for a lot of taxpayers to understand.

Since World War II, the United States has handed out foreign aid to enemy and ally alike until we may be bankrupt right now and not even know it. In all history, no country has ever been forced to pay as much reparations for losing a war as the United States has paid these past 30 years since supposedly "winning" World War II.

Gratitude

Dear Editor:

This is an open expression of thanks to David Whipple for his coaching of the Hornets this year.

He is a joy to watch and listen to. He is what Little League is about. He never puts his kids down. He boosts their ego, morale and confidence.

All coaches should take a look and listen. He has respect from his team members, his wife and children and all other parents whose children are not lucky enough to play on his team.

Entries close Sunday for Monterey Horse Show

Entries will close Sunday, June 18, for the 1978 Monterey National Horse Show July 25-Aug. 5 in the Pattee Arena of the Monterey County Fairgrounds in Monterey.

For the second year in a row, the show will be divided into a junior show (July 25-28) and an open show (July 31-Aug. 5) separated by two days during which one group of horses will leave and others arrive to be housed in the permanent and temporary stables.

Frank Jordano of Santa Barbara is manager for the horse show, which brings steeds and riders from all over the West to Monterey each year.

Parks, libraries to face Jarvis ax in August

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors recommended the first of an expected $11 million in budget cuts Tuesday, with a board majority giving the clear indication it views Proposition 13 as a public mandate to cut back on the cost and scope of government.

Services in the Carmel area most immediately affected would be parks and libraries. The county earlier had indicated plans to close its superior courts in the Monterey Peninsula courthouse annex, putting all those actions in the single Salinas facility.

The supervisors extended parks and library budgets only through August and will review cuts in those programs later.

In an earlier, separate action, the supervisors agreed to cut the hours at the Carmel Valley branch library from 46 to 40 per week. They will not close any county branch offices until they approve such actions.

The board will look into the subject of fees for a variety of services, a "pay-as-you-go" approach endorsed by Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel.

Farr said passage of the property tax limitation initiative presented "a tremendous challenge. I feel we're in a good business, that of public service."

"I'm not hearing a message that people want less services," he said. "They want better managed services."

Farr criticized the complexity of local government, the maze of agencies the public must wade through to receive services. He called for consolidation of local agencies to get a cost benefit by providing services on a larger scale.

"The problems we're trying to solve won't go away," Farr said.

Supervisor Edwin Norris of Salinas read the initiative differently, saying the public told him "taxes are too high and government is too big, too all-pervasive."

He also favored having property taxes cover only property-related services, with fees for service covering other government functions.

Personnel cuts, Norris said, would be done "in as sensitive and humane a way as possible, although I must confess I don't know a sensible, kind, humane way to say, 'Good morning. You're fired.' "

SUPERVISOR Michal Moore called Prop. 13 the end to "the era of social awareness, the era of taking care of everybody in society" by using the tax dollars of income-producing individuals to create deficits and inflation.

"If people are economically disadvantaged, it's partly because of the level of government spending," Moore said. "It's absurd to say that we can provide the level of government expenses we have and solve any problems."

Moore said public safety would be cut least under his priorities, although it will face cuts. He would trim other programs, fire county employees and still retain some cultural enrichment programs to whatever extent possible.

The board endorsed unanimously a resolution by the County Supervisors' Association of California to shift to the state the costs for Medi-Cal, all courts, welfare, Social Security, the district attorney and the public defender's offices.

It targeted for elimination nearly $2.5 million in county programs, including narcotics investigation teams, all county building projects and funds for promoting tourism and controlling litter.

The board later will consider raising the county bed tax on hotel and motel rooms from six to eight per cent to finance tourism promotional campaigns. Farr recommended that move on the urging of representatives of the Monterey Peninsula and Salinas chambers of commerce.

They argued that without promotion, tourist dollars in the competitive travel business would go elsewhere.

Tourism is the leading industry on the Peninsula, generating about $170 million in 1977, according to Roger Scott of the Salinas chamber.

Condon land price set at $230,000

A net asking price of $230,000 was attached last week to the 680 wooded acres offered as an addition to Garland Park in Carmel Valley.

Directors of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District said, however, they presently are unable to offer any response. "We've all seen the property and it's beautiful," said Kathleen Corsaut, the board president.

But she said no action could be taken until the district learns what funds, if any, it will receive after passage of the Jarvis-Gann property tax amendment.

The offer from landowner Dorothea Veder Condon was relayed by M. A. "Skip" Marquard of Porter Marquard Realty. He said Mrs. Condon wanted $340,000, but that she would donate $110,000 of the purchase price back to the district, which would lower the asking price from $500 to $338 an acre. This would give Mrs. Condon a tax advantage, said Marquard. The parcel she owns totals 785 acres.

The Condon property includes Garzas Creek and two redwood groves in Garzas Canyon. Garland Park presently covers 541 acres.

According to Marquard, Mrs. Condon plans to retain 50 acres for her residence and develop 55 additiona acres into 26 lots along Garzas Road.

Zoning on her property is now agricultural with a one-acre lot minimum. But it is desirable for development because underground water is plentiful, he said.

Marquard said her offer was contingent upon approval of the subdivision within 18 months.

Motorist hurt in collision

A 48-year-old Pacific Grove woman is in satisfactory condition at Community Hospital after her car and one driven by a Carmel Valley youth collided on Carmel Valley Road.

Maxine H. Morris has been released from the intensive care ward and is "doing fine," according to a nursing supervisor.

The California Highway Patrol said Mrs. Morris pulled out onto Carmel Valley Road from Brookdale Drive near the Carmel Valley Country Club about 3:55 p.m.

Her car collided with one driven by Lane Robert Lefholz, 16, of 7022 Valley Knoll Road.

Directors hike fee, own stipends

THE CARMEL SANITARY District boosted annexation charges for new customers Tuesday, the first increase in the fees since 1972.

The directors also voted a 7.5 per cent pay raise for district employees beginning July 1 and raised their own per-meeting stipend from $20 to $40.

They deferred until their July meeting adoption of the final budget for the 1978-79 year, waiting to get more information on the status of potential property tax revenues.

The district budget committee was prepared to propose a $3-per-month increase in the present $3 sewer charge for residential customers. According to Business Manager Bud Bigelow, this would enable the district to cut its 23-cent tax rate in half.

If the district didn't get any property tax money, the remainder of the budget could be funded out of reserve capital, Bigelow said after the meeting. By deferring a decision until July, the whole mix of user fees, property tax and reserves could change, he said.

The annexation charges were increased by the board from $250 per unit to $375 per unit in the Carmel area and from $300 to $450 for the Carmel Valley sewer area. The move came on a 3-2 vote, with directors Charlotte Hurst, Ken McGinnis and Vernon Head in favor. Directors Jim Pruitt and Ted Weller opposed the move.

Weller said the whole issue of increasing fees should be reviewed at one time, rather than in a "piecemeal" manner.

McGinnis said the budget committee viewed the increase as an "interim measure. It should have been done long ago."

He said it would affect few district customers since most are already connected to the system.

The board split on the same 3-2 vote in deciding to raise its stipend to $40 per meeting or a maximum of $120 per month. The state limit for special districts is $50 per meeting or $150 per month.

THE INCREASE HAD been suggested by general manager Max Drewein at the May meeting. The last board pay raise came 12 years ago, from $10 to $20.

Pruitt opposed the move, saying the "intent of Jarvis-Gann was to some way bring down the cost of government." He said any pay should be "a token."

Weller agreed, saying "This is not the time to do this." He said the funds—an estimated $1,200 per year—could better be spent educating district personnel at classes or workshops.

McGinnis disagreed, saying the money could be an incentive to retired persons who might want to run for the board.

He said the board shouldn't be "chicken" because of Prop. 13.

"Five dollars or $50 isn't going to make or break this district," Head added.

Pruitt, after voting against the raise, said in the future he wouldn't accept any pay for serving on the board.

"I hope you enjoy it," he told McGinnis.

"I will enjoy it," he answered. "We do 85 per cent of the work around here, three of us do."

"That was uncalled for," Weller replied, as the trio exchanged glances.

The employee pay increases were negotiated before Prop. 13 passed and won approval on a 5-0 vote. Salaries for district employees for the coming year also were approved. Drewein will earn the highest salary, $24,616, after 32 years with the district and while serving as general manager.

JIM RICE, a 2-year-old in the Carmelo School preschool program, studies the shells at Asilomar State Beach during a field trip June 2.

A group of youngsters from the Mid-Valley Parent Cooperative Preschool visited the tide pools at Asilomar State Beach in June.

Led by director Barbara Novelli, the group spent the afternoon covering the beach and probing the pools for sea life. The preschool at Carmelo School will resume in September.

A morning class for children whose parents help supervise is planned next fall as well as an afternoon session where parents can pay a fee rather than volunteer time with the youngsters. For more information, phone Mrs. Novelli at 375-0394.

PUBLIC ACCESS to the trails will be phased in three stages, according to Chandler. The golf course trail along the river will open when the golf course is completed. The trails nearest to Garland Park will open when the first 160 units are approved and the final trail areas will open when the homeowners association for the land is formed.

He said this means "when the first unit is sold."

The developers, Landmark Land Co. of Oklahoma, next will have to apply for a use permit for the construction and file a tentative map of the proposed building locations and designs.

The ultimate project envisioned calls for a 100-unit golf lodge and clubhouse, up to 400 homes and townhouses, an 18-hole golf course and a tennis club with clubhouses, 12 courts and two practice courts.

Glen Chang of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association questioned whether the developers will be able to guarantee funds for their share of four-lane costs of Carmel Valley Road, improving the Robinson Canyon Road-Carmel Valley Road intersection or ongoing operation of the sewage plant under the taxing restrictions of Proposition 13.

Public Works Director Bruce McClain said the initial money for the intersection work would be paid up front and maintenance of the road should not cost the county much more than the current road does.

The sewage plant money could come from user fees rather than a property tax, he said.

Mrs. Chang also said she was "pleased" that the Tularcitos Aquifer question will be settled before construction can begin on the residential phases.

Commissioner William Peters said the funding of road and sewer expenses is a "red flag" the developers will have to be aware of when they submit their detailed information with the tentative map.

He introduced motions to approve the trails agreement and to rezone the property.

Mrs. Cruchett, the lone opponent of the project on the commission, said the question of water supply "was supposed to be the first thing done before anything else was acted on."

"I don't think we have adhered so far to the specific plan."

THE PRESERVATION HALL Jazz Band will present a concert of New Orleans jazz Tuesday, June 20, at the Monterey Conference Center Ballroom, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. The septet is one of the last which still plays the authentic New Orleans jazz.

In Monterey Tuesday

Preservation Jazz Band due

The Preservation Hall Jazz Band will bring its righteous and classic style of New Orleans jazz to the Monterey Conference Center in a concert Tuesday, June 20.

The program begins at 8 p.m. at the conference center ballroom, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

The septet, whose members are some of the last who still play the authentic New Oreleans jazz composed of marches, quadrilles, blues, spirituals and ragtime, includes leader and trumpetist Percy Humphrey, 73; his brother, Willie Humphrey, 78, clarinetist; Josiah 'Cie" Frazier, 74, drums; "Sing" Miller, 78, piano; and Narvin Kimball, 69, on banjo and bass. The youngsters of the group are Frank Demond on trombone and Allan Jaffe on tuba.

In New Orleans, Preservation Hall is a jazz showcase, a bare-floored building in the seedy old Storyville section where musicians gather every night to play the old times back. Owner Allan Jaffe started the hall 17 years ago, after a rash of famous New Orleans musicians' deaths convinced him that "we just had to get down there and document it."

According to a San Francisco Chronicle article, the difference between Dixieland jazz and New Orleans jazz is that the true New Orleans jazz emphasizes more soul and blues, is generally in 4-4 rather than 2-4 time and is less rehearsed and precise than Dixieland jazz.

"When the white bands originally went north," John Wasserman wrote, "playing their version of New Orleans jazz, they were known as playing music from Dixie land, hence the obvious label.

THE WAY most horse owners keep horses takes a considerable amount of time and money. We earn the money by working for someone else—doing something totally irrelevant to the important things in our lives. We enjoy our horses in the time left over from money-earning activities, whenever we can squeeze out an hour or a day. And then we feel guilty because we've taken that hour or day from our families.

Our horse tour of the Midwest brought us to a community where people choose not to live this typical life of divided interests, disparate goals and daily distractions. We visited the Amish communities of Arcola, Arthur and Chesterton, Ill.

The people of these communities use horses for transportation and drawing farm equipment. Most fitting, they even use horses for growing and harvesting the grain to feed the horses.

In one field, we saw six horses hitched abreast to a corn planter and eight horses abreast pulling a roller. Beside the palomino mare on the left end on that eight-horse hitch trotted a palomino foal.

Along the shoulder of the two-lane blacktop ran dirt tracks carrying a busy horse-and-buggy traffic. A highway marker sign with the silhouette of a horse and closed buggy on it warned automobile drivers of intersections.

The purpose of our visit was to prospect for a cheap buggy—an item which is not available in California. We were to learn that there is no such thing as a cheap buggy anywhere.

WE VISITED first the Miller Coach and Carriage Co., Route 2, Arthur, Ill. Their motto is: "Where restoration is not a sideline."

In the showroom stood a great gleaming paneled coach such as the Duke of Beaufort might use to drive down to Somerset. Around it were pieces, parts, wheels, shafts and a half-finished carriage body. Miller does his work where he does his business. This impressed us as much as going to our local Ford dealer and finding that he built the cars and trucks right there.

Miller specializes in antique buggy restoration but does a considerable business in new and repaired buggies for local people and beyond. He has had customers from almost every part of the United States.

Gently, he informed us that there was no such thing as the cheap buggy we daydreamed about buying. No old wrecks out behind the barn. No lemons. No trade-ins at the used car lot. In Amish country, every usable part gets put to work again. Miller gets his leaf springs and wheel hubs from Indiana where his brother manufactures them. But he can just as easily reset an old hub with new spokes or hammer a new rim onto an old wheel.

In the back room, the cheapest buggy was an ancient Doctor's Buggy. Its fabric top definitely needed replacing but the upholstery, wheels and other parts were good. It cost $425. A newer but less fancy buckboard, open with no top, cost $600. But the eye-catcher, a brand new yellow-wheeled, lantern-lighted beauty, was priced at $2,400.

It was beyond our means, we sadly told Miller, although any of them would fetch twice the price in California.

"I know that," he responded with a grin, "but I just ask the price I need to get."

WE FOUND this same sense of integrity at all the Amish buggy shops. Prices reflected the man hours and the craftsmanship rather than the demand.

Down the road at Plank's Coach Shop, Highway 133, Arthur, Ill., there was a brand new buggy whose seat had been built on an open, elevated place on the body which made the whole affair very light and elegant. This was priced at $925. However, if we wished to buy a used, Amish-type buggy with the black enclosed top and sliding doors, one might be had for $300.

This we considered briefly. It would be a very ostentatious vehicle in Carmel Valley. It would certainly be putting on pretentions for a non-Amish person to drive. Could we allow ourselves to take something from the Plain People and use it to put on airs? No, we could not.

In recent years, young people seeking alternate lifestyles have come to Amish communities to learn some of the crafts and skills they practice. Richard Lopez, who lives in a converted school bus somewhere in California, your friend Ben Miller of the Little Creek Gear Shop says hello!

The Little Creek Gear Shop makes buggy gears and wheels. We almost bought a disused, hand-cranked forge blower. Ben Miller has gone over to an acetylene torch for spot welding. For heating iron rims to go onto wooden wheels, he makes a circle of corncobs. Laying the iron hoop on the corncobs, he sets the whole circle alight at once. The iron expands. Quickly, Ben pounds it onto the wooden rim where it shrinks to form a tightly bonded wheel.

A set of four new buggy wheels costs $240. New wooden shafts such as we saw partly carved on a work table cost $60. A two-wheeled training cart can be made for $300.

THE PRIDE of Ben Miller's current projects was a big two-wheeled show cart he was making for a woman in Chicago to show a single draft horse. It was all white and would be equipped with chrome-plated seat-framing and rear step.

Ben Miller's Little Creek Gear Shop is located at Route 2, Box 68, Arcola, Ill. Like the other Amish craftsmen in this article, he invites mail order business.

Melodrama on stage at Hartnell

An old-fashioned melodrama staged in a 19th-century cabaret setting is on stage Wednesday-Sunday evenings and Sunday afternoons at the Hartnell College Studio Theatre, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. for the evening performances and at 2 p.m. for the Sunday matinee.

My Partner is a classic melodrama, first produced in 1879, with heroes to cheer, villains to hiss and heroines in distress. The plot centers around the hero's attempts at revenge in the California gold fields.

A series of vaudeville and music hall routines will follow the melodrama, including honky-tonk piano played by Stephen Tosh, barbershop quartet music and can-can dancers.

The Hartnell Studio Theatre has been transformed into a turn-of-the-century barroom for the production. The audience will be seated at the bar or around tables and served sarsparilla and peanuts during the evening by "bosomy barmaids."

Tickets are $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for students.

For reservations or more information, phone the Hartnell Box Office, 1-758-9191, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

Fire districts

station would be shut down after the election if Prop. 13 passed. The letter also warned that fire insurance premiums would rise if service is cut back, offsetting any savings in property tax dollars.

McClain suggested in an interview that other ways of trimming the budget could include:

- Abandoning county road easements. This would place the burden for maintaining the roads in the hands of private landowners. The roads again would become private roads.
- Refusing to accept any new road deeds for new development. Thus, in all new subdivisions, the roads would remain private roads, subject to maintenance by the landowners serviced by the roads.

He said road maintenance and storm drain districts probably would not be affected during the first year under Prop. 13 if they require no major project financing. Some drainage districts in Carmel Valley could be in trouble this winter if there is "another gullywasher," McClain said, because their tax-funded budget for pumping storm water was depleted last winter. They would have no new source of revenue unless they get some property tax share, fees are instituted in the particular districts or voters approve a tax override to pay for the service.
